St. James's Palace, with its well-known old red brick entrance. The Gateway looking up St. James Street is historically interesting and outwardly beautiful. The Palace which King Henry VIII. built on the site of the Lepers' Hospital commemorates that King and Anne Boleyn by the love-knots on the side doors of the Gateway and the H. A. in the Presence-chamber. Though no longer the Royal residence, the British Court is still known officially as the "Court of St. James's."
